Childhood. Be kind to the little child. You cannot tell how one harsh word or unkind look will chil his heart and fill his eyes with tears. You may forget that the observing than older persons, and they use language before them which they would consider too impolite to be used before their friends and acquaintances .-This is a sad and fatal mistake. A child's impressions are sometimes so lasting that a whole life-time's after experience is not able to remove them. Each one may recall some of the feelings childhood which have continued to the present time, and which a sober judgment has not been able to remove. Let the words spoken to young children be gentle, loving words, which we should not regret to have them remember in after years. Let the child be treated with sincerity, and let only the words of truth be addressed to him, for in this way alone can he be taught to practice the truth in word and action. If a slight deception is detected by a child, he will not again trust you. No effort of yours can restore that perfect confidence, which is one of the most attractive attributes of childhood. regretted fate.

It was one of those bright mornings in Spring, on which the beauties of earth give a foretaste of the joys of Heaven, when the pure spirit of Mahala Vall, was summoned into the presence of her Father and her God. It may be that, as upborne upon the wings of angels towards the mansions of eternal joy, her freed spirit cast one longing, lingering look behind upon the fair world she was leaving, and the loving and beloved friends whom she could see no more again or earth. God knows! We know not whether it be allowed to the spirits of the departed to revisit the scenes of their carth ly pilgrimage—to hover around and watch over those whom they loved in life—but we know that if our deer MAHALA could speak, she would tell us not to weep for her, but to meet her again in Heaven. We mourn, but not as those without hope, for we know that to her death has been a change from siekness and sorrow into joy unspeakable and full of glory.

Her bereaved husband cannot close this poor notice with out returning his sincere thanks to those kind friends who ministered to her comfort in life, and paid respect to her mains in death. The patience with which they watched over her during her long illness of nearly five months, will be gratefully remembered as long as life endures. E V In Bladen county, on the 4th inst., Mr. WM. He has left a wife and threchildren, and a little orphan boy to mourn his loss—a loss. truly lamentable. He was one of those men that though every man honest, which was the cause of his leaving family to the mercy of the world. May the angel that bore his immortal soul to its final destiny, guide them, and the sympathising hand of charity sustain them through life, and the cries for bread of his widow and orphans sound a death knell in the cars of those who have fraudulently brought them thus .- Com.
